Red Forces Drive U. N. Troops Back Along Entire Line

TOKYO, (Wednesday), Jan. 2 (AP)—Chinese communist-invasion forces reached within 16 miles of Seoul Tuesday in the second day of a three-pronged New Year's offensive that forced the U. S. Eighth Army to withdraw all along the Korean front.

Five bridges across the Han river south of Seoul were jammed with fleeing civilians and the South Korean government met to consider abandoning the capital.

Red forces driving on Seoul from the north, south and east, were reported to have taken the city by a combination of the 1,000-mile attack and the city's own forces.

The headline Communist assault toward Seoul was combined with a powerful flanking attack near the city by at least three enemy divisions.

An eighth army spokesman said the outnumbered United Nations forces were withdrawing all along the 140-mile front with heavy equipment by an estimated 100,000 Chinese and Korean communists.

But the story of the past few days New Year's offensive slackened at least temporarily after carrying the enemy from the front lines to the rear, splitting and trapping parts of the U. N. forces.

Most of the U. N. forces were reported to be in the U. N. lines.

Retreat of up to 10 miles were reported by the U. N. forces.

The situation at the eastern end of the front, where the reds were driving into the city, was particularly serious. But the enemy's drive toward Seoul was reported to be slowing down.

North of the city, the enemy was reported to be in the U. N. lines.

Retreat of up to 10 miles were reported by the U. N. forces.

Future Stake Said High for Korean Fight

Korean Fight

By HARRY FERGUSON
UPI Foreign News Editor

Many foreign battles have been fought than the one raging today in the gates of Seoul, but only a few of them have been as fateful for the future of the world as this.

Far more than possession of a Korean city is at stake. The future of the "tried" East will be decided by the outcome. And the direction in which American foreign policy will move in 1945 will be decided partly by who is the victor and whether he wins an overwhelming decision.

Neither side will have an ally in the East. Reds hold Edge. The communists attacked with 20,000 men at a time and place of their own choosing. They were not drawn to it deliberately. It was their initiative. They have overwhelming superiority of numbers. They took the city of Seoul, the capital, and are presumably have ample supplies and reserves.

The United Nations army—those who capture Seoul and send the U. N. army reeling southward? They will have proved that they are not drawn to it deliberately. It was their initiative. They will throw their punch in an attempt to drive the U. N. army out of the city.

And what then? Then the section of opinion in the United States that holds this country is not bound fighting a land war in Asia will have a "potential" argument. It will be the argument that the program of Herbert Hoover be implemented—that we pull back our troops from the Korean peninsula.

To Afflict U. N. Reaction will show in the United States. The U. N. army will be slow to go along with us if we suggest that an invasion force be sent to Korea. We must talk to the U. N. army. We must talk to the U. N. army.

In modern war there are few alternatives. What happens in the next few days along the shifting battle arc at Seoul is going far toward determining whether we stay in Korea, or if not, we are going to do after our troops are taken off the last beachhead.

Pastor Proposes Church Emblem For U. S. Troops. BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP)—A religious insignia to be worn by members of the U. S. army forces as a reminder they are fighting for the "greater glory of God" has been proposed by a Buffalo priest.

The Rev. John J. Kelly, assistant pastor of St. Ignace church, Buffalo, made the suggestion in a week-end sermon.

Other war there may have been some doubt as to just what such a symbol would mean. But now, he said, "in this new year which is now in progress, there can be no doubt as to the meaning of the symbol."

Le Sabre Points Way to Car of Future

Auto Stylists' Dreams Are Built Into Le Sabre, GM's Experimental Vehicle

Two sets of three tail lamps are mounted on the leading edge of the rear fender. These operate as tail lamps and directional signals. At the base of the fender are two backup lights. The jet-type tail lamp is a point-to-point illuminator.

But there are enough radical ideas built into the Le Sabre to make it a car of the future. It is made partly from light-weight magnesium and aluminum alloys. Le Sabre's total weight is expected to be about 3,000 pounds.

Soil Leader Practices What He Preaches

Experts Urge Crop Reserve For War Use

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (AP)—A group of farm and economic experts has urged the government to build up the nation's grain reserves for emergency use in the event of World War III.

Declaring that "only the luck of exceptional crops saved us from food disaster" during World War II, an agriculture policy committee of the National Planning association said in a statement:

"We cannot gamble on getting the same kind of weather in the 50s as in the 40s. A prudent storage policy should prepare for a crisis of grain crops well below the level of the last several years."

The committee said wheat and corn reserves should be built up not only in this country but also in England, western Europe and Japan. It said the need is "urgent."

Feeding rates indicate grain storage reserves will be reduced substantially during the next 12 months, the group added.

The committee expected that heavy buying of grains by the government involves "danger of influencing the market of prices, and it went on to say:

"Unless congress and the fiscal-monetary authorities show vigilance to balance the budget and stem the tide of money expansion, selling aside extra grain might force direct controls in food."

"Even at this risk, however, we must be prepared with grain reserves."

"Claims upon our grain supplies are greater than ever before. Western Europe, the keystone of our defense, is dependent upon us for much of its food supply. The general war (no longer can draw from the east) A grain reserve must be built up."

The committee said the Atlantic treaty nations, now forming a unit, should have a "united food reserve policy."

The United States, the group said, should add 200,000 bushels to its reserve stockpiles during the current cattle-feeding season by cutting down on its own consumption. It estimated that the nation's grain reserves should be built up to 100,000,000 bushels by 1955.

Similarly, wheat reserves should be built up by 100,000,000 bushels by 1955.

The National Planning association is a private non-profit group.

Meeting Set for Spud Committee

POCAHELLO, Jan. 17 (AP)—A meeting of the Idaho and Eastern Oregon Potato Control committee has been set tentatively for Wednesday.

However, committee secretary J. H. Hart explained that the session may be delayed because of the difficulty in getting members from Nevada. One of the main items on the agenda is a definite date will probably be set tomorrow.

The committee will discuss an impending ban on interstate shipment of No. 2 grade potatoes. The Idaho Farm Bureau went on record in opposition to the ban at a committee meeting last Saturday.

However, at the time the cars were stopped, the 1200 Ford Fairlane from the camera, was heavily stopped and the Chevrolet was traveling at a moderate rate of speed, according to investigation. The Ford was driven by Kenneth H. Buhl, and the Chevrolet, driven by Kenneth H. Buhl, was blamed for the accident. (Staff photo—AP)

None Injured In Collision of 2 Autos Here

A loose tie-rod was blamed for an accident about 2 p. m. Monday in which two cars collided on the north approach to the Ferris Memorial bridge. No one was injured.

Dr. Kalkuly was called to the scene to talk to an employee. The place was open-but the mayor could not find the man for whom he was searching. So he sat down to write a note to leave for the employee.

While he was writing the note the man for whom he was looking, who had been in the warehouse all the time, decided to leave. He locked the door behind him and locked the man who was writing the note.

Dr. Kalkuly eventually attracted the attention of Leo Rodwin, who was passing on the street, by calling out a window. Rodwin notified the manager of the warehouse and the mayor was called.

E. E. Adams, Jerome, newly elected president of the state soil conservation association, practices what he preaches. His practice of soil conservation goes beyond generally accepted practices and he designs new methods of improving conservation. Here he is inspecting a drop structure he designed to prevent erosion. The drop structure is a simplified adaptation of standard practices. (Soil conservation service photo—staff engraving)

Adams believes in trees as windbreaks. He has planted more than 2,500 in 10 years on his two farms. The windbreaks extend for more than three miles. One of his farms is in the Barrymore district near Jerome and the other is near Eden. His windbreaks are designed to prevent wind erosion. (Soil conservation service photo—staff engraving)

Adams came to Idaho from Missouri as a small boy in 1909. He grew up on the north side as the asparagus was being cleared from the land and planting water was something new to most of the land owners. He attended Jerome schools and went one year to the University of Idaho. He and his family are well known in Gooding where they operated the Adams food market for 10 years during the depression years. Adams always has a desire to be an architect and tried his ability by designing his home in Gooding.

The city limits of a small town seemed too confining for the Adams family and he and Mrs. Adams decided that what their sons needed was plenty of room. Ten years ago they moved to their present ranch home east of town. When they moved onto the ranch the house was rather small for the three boys, one girl and their parents so they enlarged and made room for the boys in the basement.

Adams recently completed what most families would call the "ideal" room. It started out to be a recreation room but developed into the "livingest" room in the house. It was designed and built by Adams.

It was built at an angle with the rest of the house and it is situated that the winter sun hits it but the afternoon summer sun does not. The room has two large windows, one on the south and the other on the east. The south end features a sunken garden in the middle of which stands a common pink geranium which has grown to the tremendous height of more than 6 feet.

Mrs. Adams calls her husband a "soil conservationist" and she is president of the Chamber of Commerce at Gooding, has been a member of the Gooding Rotary club and has been past noble grand of the Odd Fellows lodge in the same city.

Adams doesn't just talk about conservation practices he has heard about. He practices them himself and knows how valuable they are to Idaho farmers. He owns 100 acres of Eden. On these two farms he has planted more than 2,500 trees for windbreaks. Some of the plantings are more than eight years old. To build the fertility of the soil on lands depleted through the war years "chopping." Adams did not
